

are not as thrifty as those from American stock. They winter kill. The site - a southern slope and limestone soil is also unfavorable for their growth. (Limestone near the surface).

An exception to the above was noted in the case of five trees of the M^r Farland variety. - developed from scions. These trees are growing on a northern slope, and are apparently very hardy.

The owners are shipping their nuts to Chicago - last year three tons of Godfrey, Ill.

Amelia Riehl,

Letter "1/26/78. Not afraid of blight. If had more land would plant more trees. Grove of seedling trees their surest source of income. Never fail. at least $1000. per year from 15 acres of rough land suitable only for pasture.