State Department of Education Reports 2004-05 “Adequate Yearly Progress” under NCLB

For a second year in a row, more than 80 percent of Connecticut’s elementary and middle schools achieved adequate yearly progress (AYP) under the federal No Child Left Behind (NCLB) Act of 2001, according to results of the 2004 Connecticut Mastery Test (CMT). A total of 653, or 82 percent, of the 798 schools analyzed met the following standards:

- 65 percent of students must be proficient in mathematics on the CMT;
- 57 percent must be proficient in reading;
- 70 percent must be at or above the basic performance in writing; and
- 95 percent must participate in the CMT testing.

Under NCLB criteria, standards must be met by the whole school and also by each subgroup of 40 or more students, including white, black, Hispanic, students with disabilities, English language learners, and economically disadvantaged.

“What the results tell us is that a large percentage of our schools are continuing to meet the NCLB standards. This says a lot about the commitment of our educators to the achievement of their students,” said Betty J. Sternberg, commissioner of education. “But we still have plenty of work to do.”

A total of 145 elementary and middle schools did not make AYP. “We need to continue to turn our focus and energy to reducing this number,” said Dr. Sternberg. “We remain committed in our efforts to make certain that all students achieve the highest academic standards possible. To accomplish this we will continue to work relentlessly with school districts, particularly those that did not make AYP, to ensure they make sufficient progress over time.”

The State Department of Education has implemented an accountability model for school improvement. The program is designed to provide teacher training and district-level leadership development to establish high standards for all students. Educators use research-based teaching strategies, monitor student progress frequently, and provide effective and immediate interventions for students who are not performing at high levels.

Last year 145 schools did not make AYP and this year 37 of those schools made AYP. Of those 37 Schools, 14 were identified as “in need of improvement” last year. Further sanctions for these schools are on hold pending next year’s AYP results. If they continue to make AYP next year, they will no longer be designated as “in need of improvement.” This year 145 schools were identified as not making AYP, including 41 new schools that previously made AYP. There are 103 schools that were identified in the past as not making AYP and again this year and are therefore “in need of improvement.” This means that these 103 schools have not made AYP for at least two consecutive years in the same content area. Of the 103 schools identified as “in need of improvement,” 85 are Title 1 schools. Title 1 schools are identified by the district based on poverty, educational need and the availability of funds. The results for the 103 schools also indicate the following:

- 19 are in Year 1 of school improvement;
- 78 are in Year 2 of school improvement;
- 6 are in Year 5 of school improvement.

The six schools in Year 5 of school improvement were previously identified under Connecticut’s old accountability system. The remaining 97 schools “in need of improvement” have been identified under the NCLB accountability system within the last three years.

Title I schools that are identified as “in need of improvement” face the following consequences:

- Schools in Year 1 of school improvement must develop a two-year school improvement plan in consultation with parents and school district staff members within 90 days of identification. The plan is submitted to the district leadership for review and to the local board of education for approval. The school improvement plan must be comprehensive and be focused on the school’s instructional program. The plan must target the school’s areas of academic deficiency and be grounded in scientifically based research. As part of the plan, teachers must be provided with ongoing, high-quality training focused on core academic subjects and targeted to the school’s greatest areas of need. In addition to the school improvement plan, schools in Year 1 must provide the opportunity for all eligible students in the school to transfer to another public school within the district that has not been identified as “in need of improvement.”
- Schools in Year 2 of school improvement must continue to implement the Year 1 consequences, but must also begin to offer supplemental educational services.
- Schools in Year 5 of school improvement must implement the restructuring plan they developed over the course of the last year. The restructuring plan must reflect major reforms, such as significant changes in staffing, leadership, structure and governance.

A school can be removed from “in need of improvement” status if it makes AYP for two consecutive years. Fourteen schools previously identified as “in need of improvement” made AYP this year. While they remain “in need of improvement,” the consequences do not progress to the next level, but remain as they were last year. If these schools make AYP again next year, they will no longer be considered a school “in need of improvement.”

Reasons schools did not make AYP:

|  |    |
|--|----|
| Whole school math and reading achievement      | 38 |
| Whole school math academic achievement         | 13 |
| Whole school reading academic achievement      | 36 |
| Subgroup math and reading academic achievement | 18 |
| Subgroup math academic achievement             | 19 |
| Subgroup reading academic achievement          | 21 |

Results also indicate that no schools were identified as failing to make adequate yearly progress for not reaching 95 percent participation, either by the whole school or by any subgroup.
